No one was injured. Carlisle, whose face was hidden under a white bandanna, leapt from the train about three miles from Rock Springs, Wyo. He landed and rolled near the moving wheels, so close that his glass gun shattered against the rails. The gain from the robbery was only $52.35, but news of the "White Masked Bandit" spread quickly.

If you've ever known a person to rise above their harsh circumstances you'll easily relate to Bill Carlisle. His remarkable optimism, his magnetic personality just leap from the pages. It is testimony to his loyalty that so many of his ranching friends stood by him, trusted him, and came to his defense.

The rights to his story were bought in 1950 but the film was never made. He wrote his autobiography in 1946, and received a full pardon from the Governor of Wyoming in 1947. Carlisle sold his motel in Laramie in 1956.

Bill never shot or injured anyone in his hold-ups; further, he never robbed a woman passenger. He had, like most old-time cowboys, a wholesome respect for women—all women. This story of his life reads like the dime-novel fiction of an earlier day, but every incident of his daring and gripping exploits is a matter of record throughout Wyoming and all Western states.
