Universities urged to take opportunity to modernise, as government 's next strategic plan set to boost research and technology. China 's higher education sector is expected to benefit as the government rolls out its 14th Five-Year Plan (FYP) during a Communist Party plenum this week. The policy, which will determine the direction the country takes post-pandemic, from 2021 to 2025, is likely to include greater investments in science, technology, innovation and research-industry ties.

There ' s certainly room for more thinking about how to shape the relief bill to reform higher education. But I ' ll leave it at that. The important point is that we must put an end to business as usual. Over the last two months we have seen university politics take over the streets of many American cities.
