Undifferentiated Blanket Judgements and Insults. Overbearing, partial, brash: Said's book Music at the Limits compiles the great Arab intellectual's music criticism. A review by Jens Rossteck. The German book cover certainly incites curiosity. From behind a transparent orange dust cover, an alert, sharply contoured intellectual visage looks out at the reader: an elegant older gentleman with salt-and-pepper hair, who turns out to be the respected Arab-American thinker Edward W. Said (1935–2003).
